WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24, 1901.
THE DIFFERENCE.

There has been some speculation regarding the difference that existed in the sixteenth, seventeenth and as late as the eighteenth centuries in the march of liberty and free institutions in France and in England. When the policy of the two peoples is understood in their efforts to secure freedom and free institutions there is no difficulty in arriving at the causes which gave to the people of England freedom of thought and freedom of action and secured to the people of France absolutism and despotism as a result of their efforts to procure liberty.

The difference was not in the intelligence of the people of England and the learning of the people of France, who obtained despotism as a result of their efforts to develop free institutions.

The people of France in the centuries mentioned were among the most advanced and intelligent people in Europe, who were earnestly seeking liberty as a means to secure a more elevated position in learning and general intelligence. In literature and in the earlier development of letters the names of many French scholars continue to be prominent as examples of learning and research. The cause for success by the people of England in securing free government was not in their superior mental ability or their greater learning over the French people as the latter were among the most active and advanced people intellectually then on the European continent. The causes that led to liberty in England and to despotism in France were not at the time fully understood. The people of both countries were contending earnestly for freedom and the work that was going forward to secure it, through the efforts of each people was often bathed in blood, more particularly in France did blood flow freely to secure free government, yet the result was despotism in its worst form to the people of France while an opposite termination of effort in England was secured and free government became a leading feature in the history of the English people.

It could not have been chance that gave liberty to the one people and despotism to the other as there is no result flowing from chance. It will appear strange when it is said that the result to each people of their efforts to secure liberty came from intelligent work, which should be a lesson to all liberty loving people not to engage in making changes, or innovations in their systems of government as a seemingly small matter not understood, or that is not deemed worthy of consideration may prove fatal to free institutions and to freedom.

When the feudal system existed on the continent proper and in England there was a determined effort by the people to secure for themselves liberty from feudal slavery entailed upon them in a barbarous age. The feudal lords held the lands and the people cultivated them for the lords, who received the larger part of the benefits derived from the soil. The people were subject to these lords in a way that gave them power over them in an absolute way. These land owners, or lords, were largely independent of the king and often made war upon him, which placed him largely in a position of dependence. In France and in other parts of the continent where the feudal system had its origin these lords were very independent and ruled over the people. They also gave limits to the power of the king over themselves, which made them when acting together absolute. There came a union of effort by the king and the people to overcome the feudal lords to secure freedom from their dominion in the State, which was successful. The people by aiding the king became free from the rule of the lords, but the king refused to give to the people any part of the liberty secured from the lords and as a result they succeeded in transferring a slave condition from many masters to one which relation of one master and many slaves continued in France till the Revolution.

The transfer of power from the lords to the king was accomplished by Richelieu when he was prime minister which was afterwards consolidated as a one man absolute government under Louis XIV. The feudal system of lords and land owners did not have any part of its origin in England after the manner of the system in France or upon other parts of the continent. The system was taken to England from France by William, the Conqueror, who made it a part of his system for the government of England after the conquest. The system was foreign to England, but it continued to flourish on English soil from the eleventh to the fifteenth century, when it was abolished.

William, the Conqueror, imposed it upon the country while he and those who supported him in his usurpation retained absolute power over the lords and over the people. In France the contention for freedom from the almost absolute power of the kings of England made an appearance and was continued till freedom was secured by the lords and the people.

In France the contention was made by the kings and the people against the lords and when the lords were defeated the king became absolute. In England the contention was maintained by the lords and the people against the king. When the king was defeated the lords could not centralize power as the king did in France and as a consequence the body of the people secured freedom and a representative government. The pivot in both countries was the feudal system which was established in France in the early history of the country as a system of government, while the people were barbarous. The system continued to give power to the lords against the king and the people. The system in England being a foreign system the Conqueror imposed it upon a conquered people while he resorted to a conquered people while he remained absolute which united the people, rich and poor, against the king. There is not a people who have lived, who have made the sacrifices to secure liberty that the people of France have made, which largely accounts for the tolerance there was present in the Revolution.

retained absolute power over the lords and over the people. In France the contention for freedom from the almost absolute power of the kings of England made an appearance and was continued till freedom was secured by the lords and the people.

THE JOURNAL.

NEVADA'S LEADING DAILY AND WEEKLY.

A VISIT TO OUR PROGRES-SIVE SISTER REPUBLIC.

Oscar J. Smith Gives the "Journal" an Interesting Description of Conditions Existing in Mexico.

OSCAR J. SMITH has returned from a trip to Mexico and has favored the Journal with an interesting interview. For the past ten or twelve years Mr. Smith has spent nearly half his time in this sister Republic and has taken careful note of prevailing conditions and watched the progress of the nation.
GOVERNMENTAL CONDITIONS.
The monarchical party in Mexico has practically passed out of existence.
The people are nearly a unit in democratic ideas and fealty to republican rule. As far as the government of the United States is understood, this nation has become their model. President Diaz is a progressive man, as democratic in his rule as conditions in that country permit him to be. His cabinet is composed of broad minded men, some of whom I know personally and can attest to their liberal and progressive views of government. The people of Mexico are at peace with the world and with themselves. No insurrection of consequence has taken place or been attempted in the past twenty years.
RELIGION.
When President Diaz assumed the reigns of government there was inaugurated a complete separation of Church and State. This gap has widened in the past decade. There is no established church, but over 95 per cent of the inhabitants are Catholics. Less than one per cent of the natives are Protestants. The foreign element are practically the only non-Catholics. Religious toleration prevails throughout the Republic.
EDUCATION.
The upper class of Mexicans are better educated than those of other Spanish-American countries. Their children are largely schooled in the United States. Great illiteracy prevails in the lower classes, but, I learn, the government contemplates a scheme of public school training similar to that in vogue in this country.
SOCIAL RELATIONS
In the upper circles the people are governed by continental society rules.
For instance, a girl is chaperoned from the cradle to the grave. Among the uneducated there are less favorable conditions prevailing, but the government is doing wonders in the uplifting of its lower classes.
MINING.
Within the past decade the gold output has increased ten fold. Neither has the production of silver languished.
The white metal, as all know, is the standard of value. Gold coinage is simply a side issue and if anyone becomes possessed of a considerable quantity of gold coin, he ships it to some other country to be sold as bullion. Copper mining is rapidly growing industry. Several enormous propositions have recently been discovered.

WHAT PLAN
IS YOURS?

The Ladies of the Red Cross Society Propose to Donate $250 to Reno.

The Reno Red Cross Society finds itself in a peculiar predicament. It is faced not with a deficit, but with a surplus. This society has about $250 in the treasury and what to do with it is the question.
Wars and rumors of wars seem to be about at an end. Old Mars has washed the blood from his countenance and shines with clear white radiance.
Neither fire flood, nor any other great national calamity gives occasion to relieve suffering humanity. Reno has no abject poor, who suffer for the necessaries of life. Charity under existing conditions, local and general, would be obtrusive, injudicious and unwise.
Now, what shall be done with this quarter of a thousand dollars? A couple of members of the society have taken the Journal and the public into their council. Do the people of Reno wish the money to be spent in placing a fountain on the Plaza? If they do, let them address this paper. Is there any other way in which this fund could be used to public advantage? Send in your suggestions.
A public fountain would refresh man and beast alike. There are few if any places in Reno where the faithful dog or horse may slake his thirst. Not only visitors but residents of Reno would appreciate a font of flowing water in the center of the town.
THE QUICK OR THE DEAD.
That time of the year is arriving when the Reno physicians begin to advise their clients against drinking from shallow wells without the preliminary of boiling. The Journal scribe, if ever forced to drink well water will take it unboiled. He prefers rather to imbibe a mehenagerie than a cemetery.
THE BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT.
Some of the best talent of Reno in eloquence and music will be presented to the people of this town at the Baptist Church Wednesday evening, May 1st. Don't fail to hear some of our best pianists on that occasion. The entertainment begins at 8 o'clock. Admission, adults, 50 cents; children, 25

CAPTURED
BY PYTHIANS

Reno Taken by Storm Last Night by Caranitas—Sweet Music Discouraged.

Reno was invaded last evening by an army of Pythian Knights. The city willingly capitulated and the generous captors entertained their prisoners with dulcet harmonies.
The Carson Knights were accompanied by their band, the famous Nevada band. The musicians, after playing for the parade to Pythian castle, stationed themselves on the balcony of Wheelmen's hall and discouraged the finest music ever heard in Reno. The overture was greeted with a storm of applause from the two thousand people assembled. This was followed by a beautiful duet by Messrs.
Lichtenburg and Rayercraft. Other selections, just as melodious, followed in quick succession. There were repeated calls for Professor Smith, the leader of the band. The crowd wanted a speech, but got a cornet solo. This band, it will be remembered took San Jose by storm during the Golden Jubilee. It was pronounced by California critics the best musical aggregation on the coast.
Meanwhile the Pythians were busily and pleasantly engaged. With the aid of the fifty visitors from Carson the local Pythians gave novitiates the entire into the castle. Work was performed in all of the degrees.
At the conclusion of the secret work a banquet was spread. Over a hundred people enjoyed the viandas and the alt that were passed around. The visitors left on a special train shortly after midnight.

A GREAT
ROAD RACE

Preparations Being Made for the Opening Event of the Year In Cycledom.

The annual road race of the Reno Wheelmen's Club, which was to have taken place Sunday next, has been postponed for a week or ten days in order to give the committee more time in which to perfect arrangements.
The race is the first of the kind ever given in the State, and will be interesting in the extreme. It will be a sealed handicap, and from fifteen to twenty riders will participate. The time of the race and the course over which it will be run has not yet been decided upon, but will probably be inside of ten days and start from the Wheelmen's hall, go down one side of the river cross the Glendale bridge and return on the other side.
The details of the race are in the hands of Claude Mershon and John Shaver, of the Racing Board, and anyone wishing to enter the same will make application to them at once. Valuable prizes will be given to the winners, and as soon as selected will be on exhibition in the display windows of the various stores.
It is the intention of the business men to give the prizes, and the way the boys are training for the event proves that the race will be hotly contested.
A relay of assistants will be stationed all along the route a mile apart to see that no cheating goes on, and to assist in case of accidents. But we will have more to say as the plans mature.

MYSTERY
SOLVED.

A Dead Man's Identity Discovered Yesterday by George
Perkins.

A couple of weeks ago a young man was found dead in his room in a Sierra street hotel. He had inscribed the name Edward Bland on the register.
An inquest was held at which nothing developed other than that he was a shepherd and had worked for Dan Wheeler. After the inquest the body was consigned to Undertakers Perkins for interment in the Potter's field.
Mr. Perkins noticed that the face was a very intelligent one and he had intuitive knowledge that the young man had borne an assumed name. Instead of burying the body, he em-balmied it and made inquiries in all directions to discover if the deceased had relatives and to learn his history.
For several days he was unsuccessful, but recently he found that the man had been at Steamboat Springs a year ago. Working on this clue he traced his history till he discovered that his name was Edward Booth and that he resided at Jacksonville, Oregon, where his mother, a brother and two sisters lived.
The young man had gotten into trouble north and came to Nevada to avoid arrest.

ACTION OF
RACING BOARD

The Reno Wheelmen Racing Board held a meeting last evening and unanimously elected Ed. N. Shaver Captain for the ensuing term. Up to the present season Mr. Shaver has been one of the Wheelmen's best relay riders, and has put forth his best efforts to assist the Wheelmen to the top of the ladder where they are today.
Ed. holds the State championship for one and five miles, and his long experience as a rider ably fits him for the responsible position to which he has just been chosen. The Board has made a good selection, and at the same time showed their appreciation for the good work of the retiring "Champ." Upon being elected captain, Mr. Shaver tendered his resignation as a member of the Racing Board in order that he may have more time to fill the vacancy.

Many Things Are Meant

By many dealers who claim to handle groceries. When they advertise cheapness no mention is made of PRICE. When price is mentioned QUALITY IS OVER-LOOKED. Again, sometimes they dwell on the virtues of a LARGE STOCK. In this case no claim is made to carrying FRESH GOODS.

We Preach the Three Plain Virtues of Groceries—

Quality Quantity Price

They are mentioned in their regular order and the happy combination is obtaining hosts of pleased patrons at our store.
